I would like to add an image to a Google Maps CSS sprite. How can I do that? A: GIF is the default format Google Maps uses for this type of sprite. Simply append your sprite to the sprite CSS, for example: background-image: url(sprite.png) -10px -10px no-repeat; Or with the square PNG sprite format: background-image: url(sprite.png) -140px -100px no-repeat; The original sprite.png is 10 px wide and 100px tall. -10px from each side of the sprite to bring it to the correct position. -100px from the top of the sprite to make it tile when mapped down. 100px is a simple margin-top of the sprite on the tiles, you can use any number. For example, if you put your image in the left-top corner of the sprite, -100px from the top will put it there. -10px on both sides will bring it to the right-top corner. A Little Bit of Star Wars A Little Bit of Star Wars is a fan film, and the first one in the Star Wars Expanded Universe.
